

Beneath THE Surface

Mental Health Awareness Play

Inspired by the truth faced by a First Nations teen in East Vancouver, British Columbia, we address the realities faced by youth, both Aboriginal and Non Aboriginal.

This theatre production touches on many relevant and poignant topics, such as gender identity, bullying, substance abuse, mental health, depression and suicide. We also educate and inform youth of Canadian History, and Reconciliation. Our all-aboriginal cast is committed to expressing the many challenges youth and young adults face, with the conclusion towards resolution and the many possibilities and opportunities towards health and wellness; while creating new dialogues and channels through artistic expression. Each season this work of art is renewed through our actors, by the telling of their stories and the effects history has had on them personally.
